OVERVIEW

The eLearning revolution has transformed the landscape of learning and teaching. A wide variety of subjects in higher education and P-12 contexts are now taught online. This Online Learning and Teaching concentration is for those interested in the development and management of online learning systems. Students may earn either a graduate certificate (18 hours) or a Master of Education degree (36 hours) specializing in this concentration. The IST program develops professionals who are grounded in instructional technology foundations, principles, theories, applications, and current trends and provides opportunities to integrate different forms of technology to enhance teaching and learning. To ensure a high quality education this program is mapped onto standards from AECT, ATD, ISPI, ISTE, and NCDPI. The program is offered 100% online.

*“New technology is common,
new thinking is rare.”*
– Sir Peter Blake
